Mixed Member Proportional (MMP)

A Mixed Member Proportional (MMP) system combines single member electoral districts with a party vote list system that achieve proportional representation. Each voter gets two votes—one for their local electoral district representative and the other for the

The Assembly wants to hear from British Columbians. It wants to hear if they share its conviction that local representation needs to be an important element in the province's electoral system. It wants to hear if they agree with it that a more proportional system would better reflect the basic values of our province's population. It wants to hear what kind of choices they would like to see at the polls. And it is anxious to hear what kind of electoral system our fellow citizens believe can best express our common values.”
